

Insignificant Events in the Life of a Cactus
Dusti Bowling

Question	Reference	Question ID
<input type="radio"/> In which book does someone point at a character and shout, "Her arms fell off!" and then run away screaming to his mom?	Page 1	Q0001
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a mom have to cuddle her son on her lap and rub his head for like ten minutes to get him to calm down?	Page 1	Q0002
<input type="radio"/> In which book has a character not thought about the idea that her arms must have actually fallen off at some point in her life?	Page 1	Q0003
<input type="radio"/> In which book are a character's missing arms not an issue for her or her parents?	Page 1	Q0004
<input type="radio"/> In which book do a character's parents always say things like, "You'll have to do this differently from other people, but you can manage"?	Page 2	Q0005
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character find herself aware of her total armlessness, and feels like she is sort of naked all of a sudden?	Page 2	Q0006
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character ask how she can get new arms?	Page 2	Q0007
<input type="radio"/> In which book is a character told to stop crying because having arms is totally overrated?	Page 2	Q0008
<input type="radio"/> In which book do characters say, "Eating spaghetti with my arms is just so boring. I wish I could eat it with my feet"?	Page 3	Q0009
<input type="radio"/> In which book can a character do most everything everyone else can do: eat cereal, brush her teeth and hair, get dressed, and wipe her own bottom?	Page 3	Q0010
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character want to scream in frustration and kick a pillow until the stuffing comes out because it's taken her twenty minutes to get her pants buttoned?	Page 3	Q0011
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character get asked almost every day what has happened to her arms?	Page 4	Q0012
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character end up with a poofy pink tutu thing stuck around her neck for about five minutes?	Page 4	Q0013
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character tell someone that her arms burned off in a fire?	Page 4	Q0014
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character find a great hobby: making up stories?	Page 4	Q0015
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character think she has heard the name Tanzania in an episode of 'Scooby-Doo' or something?	Page 4-5	Q0016
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character say, "She pulled me from my burning crib and raced out of our flaming village, leaving a trail of fire all the way down the mountain"?	Page 5	Q0017
<input type="radio"/> In which book do characters look like they are concentrating so hard on being serious, their heads might explode if they blink?	Page 5	Q0018
<input type="radio"/> In which book do parents try not to laugh out loud all the way home after meeting with their daughter's teacher?	Page 5-6	Q0019
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a story explode out of someone like an overfilled water balloon?	Page 6	Q0020
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character tell a crazy story about how she rescued a puppy that had been tied to the train tracks just in time before a train nearly ran over it?	Page 6	Q0021
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character spit chocolate milk across the table?	Page 6	Q0022
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character make her stories as ridiculous as possible so that people will always know she is joking?	Page 7	Q0023
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character never think that her parents will make her move and go to a new school right after starting eighth grade?	Page 7	Q0024
<input type="radio"/> In which book has a character never imagined that she would perform for an audience in the desert and solve a mystery?	Page 7	Q0025
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character think that it is quite possible that aliens have taken over her dad's brain?	Page 8	Q0026
<input type="radio"/> In which book is a character always saying, "If the public only knew what the government was up to, there would be a revolution!"?	Page 8	Q0027
<input type="radio"/> In which book is a character not completely sure why an eighty-six-year-old woman who lives in a trailer is the only person privy to top-secret information?	Page 8	Q0028
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character not put it past the government to insert some kind of mind-control chip into her Dad's brain?	Page 8	Q0029
<input type="radio"/> In which book do parents discuss moving over a dinner of buttered noodles?	Page 9	Q0030
<input type="radio"/> In which book does a character realize that her parents deliberately buttered her up with buttered noodles?	Page 9	Q0031
<input type="radio"/> In which book is a character invited to apply for the position of general manager at an amusement park?	Page 9	Q0032